Beauty Sleep Demanded By One's Entire System

We have all had the necessity for eauty sleep impressed upon us fron hildhood up, but it is a need we neglect systematically as soon as we escape from the guidance of our parents. It seems a waste of time, but it is far from being so. Nerves, eyes, complex-ion, the entire system, fight for their rightful amount of sleep; not only sleep,

Before any-ne else has thought of making a garden, the mistress of such a plot is poking and jabbing at the soil, planting inion, carrot, parenip, and radish seed n very tiny drills, only six inches apart, across the bed, and then scattering rape seed broadcast over the whole thing. The rape seed she scatters simply be-cause it is a vigorous grower that comes up early and is very nice for greens. It has all been used by the time the regular garden making is on in full blast. A very little of it is planted right along until fall so there may always be a little for soup flavoring. One plant (or possibly two) of sage, thyme, sweet marjoram, summer savory, parsley and caraway take up some room at one end of the bed, the rest is planted in rows in the following order:

IN SOUP BED

Everything nowadays is done to BIT of garden soil about three by hastily, and many a man or woman has relinquished the right to happiness brough silly impulse, when, perhaps, if they had given more thought to the matter they would have be a less eager to take a step that in all probability they will later learn to regret. We have all at different periods in o ves had days and weeks and months that seemed all gray and blue to us, for sorrow and trouble blinds one for the ime. And yet, afterward, looking back lown the years one can see that even n those days there was happiness and sunshine as well as sorrow and shadow. It is so, so true that we do not often realize that we are happy until that happiness has slipped away from us. Men and women are too slow to forgive each other, not liberal enough, not give each other, not liberal enough, not "big" enough, to overlook the short-comings and remember only the good. Too many do not learn until it is too late that the happiness and love and companionship were worth the little sorrows that went along with them. Nothing in the world is perfect except a sunset, or a spring morning, or a bit of blue sky. Certainly things on earth aren't perfect, and if we would be happy we must be reconciled to taking a few thorns with the roses.

For some unknown reason even those people who have a keen sense of humor object strenuously to being themselves the point of a joke. To such an explanation is impossible, and with them a reconciliation is rarely if ever effected after their vanity has suffered.

To the onlooker the attitude of that man or woman who cannot take a quip from a merry minded friend is pitiful, as much can be lightened in every one's life by the giving or taking of a well meant bit of quizzing.

Did the angered one but pause, he or she would see that behind the jest lies affection, for no evit thought prompts the jest of a friend, but rather the desire to amuse and lift some burden by a chance fancy, for laughter heals many an ache and gives double pleasure when and wholesome.
